

70th anniversary

Town remembers sacrifices of war

Drayton Valley joined other communities across the country last Friday in commemorating those Canadians who sacrificed their lives for freedom in three separate wars.

Exactly 70 years since the signing of the armistice which ended the First World War, the Remembrance Day ceremony began as it has in past years with a parade through the downtown area. The marchers - ranging from war veterans to boy scouts - were led by the Royal Canadian Legion color party and members of the local RCMP detachment, who were clad in their ceremonial scarlet tunics.

Following the laying of wreaths at the cenotaph, onlookers and dignitaries congregated inside the Legion Hall for the second part of the ceremony.

Guest speaker Joe Clark, taking a break from the election campaign, told a crowded hall it was nice to see so many people - especially young people - attending a ceremony that honored the 110,000 Canadians killed while defending freedom in other parts of the world.

Canada has always played a major role in world peace, he said, pointing to the country's extensive participation with United Nations peacekeeping forces - this year's recipients of the Nobel Peace Prize.

Other dignitaries included Drayton Valley MLA Shirley Cripps, Mayor Bob Mayhew, Rev. Wes Herbert, Legion president Betty McGee, Legion Ladies' auxiliary representative Lil Ross and Brazeau MD Reeve Henry Ronsseau.

The local ceremony also revived an old tradition when Joe MacLellan gave a rendition of In Flanders Fields.

Legion vice-president Vern Bartlett acted as master of ceremonies for the third consecutive year.

Marjorie Durham, whose son Kenneth was killed on D-Day, lays a wreath on behalf of mothers who lost sons in three wars. She is assisted by Const. Doug Hill.

Kids wowed by galactic exploration

By Belinda Atkinson

When a group of Grade 8 students clamoured into a big inflatable dome, it was easy to recall an opening line from the famed Star Trek series.

The dome: a mobile planetarium. The line: "these are the voyages of the starship Enterprise. The mission: to boldly go where no man has gone before."

With a good imagination and some help from Raymond Kluthe, tour guide, the group went where no man has gone before - deep space, 250,000 light years away.

"There are 200 billion stars in the galaxy," Kluthe begins as he transforms the dome into a clear night sky.

The students lie down and Kluthe continues: "The Milky Way is so huge, it defies imagination."

Kluthe explains the time and space measurements between the outer stars of the galaxy and the youngsters respond with gasps.

"This is how the Milky Way would look from outside the galaxy," he says, showing a photograph of the Andromeda

Galaxy. "We're looking 2.2 million light years back in time."

Kluthe introduces a number of constellations and the students strain to see resemblance.

"They must have had good imaginations back then," one boy says.

"I can see Orion," adds another.

"No, Orion isn't up there yet."

Kluthe points to a black hole and the children become immediately interested.

"I want to end the misconception that a black hole is a huge cosmic vacuum cleaner," he says.

He explains that stars can be consumed if they get close enough but this rarely occurs.

And unlike science fiction novels in which spaceships travel through a black hole into another universe, Kluthe says anything would be torn apart.

"Cool," one boy says.

"Is it true there are diamonds in the rings of Saturn?" one girl asks.

Government to examine traffic concerns

Alberta Transportation plans to take a "hard look" at the traffic problems north of Drayton Valley.

Charles Lendzion, regional director for Alberta Transportation says they will focus their attention on the strip from the airport intersection north to the access into Northside Meadows.

Concerns have been expressed by the RCMP and private citizens about the airport road intersection, campground, golf course and Northside Meadows access roads.

However, any evaluation of the traffic will have to wait until next year, Lendzion says the traffic at this time of the year, especially into the campground and golf course doesn't compare with the spring or summer.

"I hope this doesn't sound like we're stalling," Lendzion told The Western Review.

Lendzion says a check of the records for the past five years only shows one accident at the Northside Meadows access. "That doesn't normally warrant any work," he said.

He's not even sure a turning lane into the campground and Northside Meadows would help the situation. "A turning lane may have or may not have helped," Lendzion added.

Logging activity has picked up at the Pelican Spruce Mills oriented strand board plant.

Last month 3,500 loads were received.

Sixty-nine per cent of the eligible voters in the Yellowhead Riding voted in the '94 election. Tory Joe Clark led the polls with 74 per cent followed by the NDP with 14 and the Liberals had eight per cent.

This year the Yellowhead Riding is smaller. Due to redistribution there are only 52,372 eligible voters compared to 72,000 four years ago.

The addition to the south end of the oriented strandboard plant has been completed and equipment will be arriving in the next three weeks.

The Municipal District of Brazeau has been in a spending mood of late.

Councillors recently accepted $40,510 for computers, another $11,534 to buy furniture for the director's office and $2,700 for venetian and vertical blinds for the executive offices. A new photo copier will cost $6,742.

Coverage of Monday's federal election will be carried in the Nov. 29 issue of The Western Review.

The chamber of commerce is drafting a letter for the MD to follow up a recent request for funding. A recent survey carried out by the chamber office shows that 21 per cent of the owner/manager, associated with small business in Drayton Valley live in the MD.

Doreen Schanung of Evansburg is $10,000 richer thanks to the instant game lottery.

The MD of Brazeau decided at last Thursday's meeting to purchase a 966E loader from R. Angus for $166,825.

In other MD news, the Phoenix Group has been selected to carry out the engineering services for the Rocky Rapids water management plant.

Lock box users asked to notify correspondents of address change

By Belinda Atkinson

Lock box users will receive cards in the mail this week asking that all correspondents be notified of the upcoming change of address.

"Around 900 to 1,200 people will get cards in the mail," said Postmaster Le-Roy Robinson. "All those who are changing from lock boxes to supermailboxes."

Robinson said the post office will drop the $10 fee for forwarding mail. Change-of-address cards, which normally cost 37 cents, will also be provided free of charge.

"The normal charges have been waived in this instance because the post office instigated the change," he said.

He added that mail forwarding service will be provided for the next seven months, rather than the usual four-month period.

"Seven months is more than enough time. Christmas is coming pretty soon and most people will be able to send out a change of address before the end of the year," he said.

Supermailboxes have received much attention lately but Robinson says he's received only a few complaints.

"There are always a few people who resist change but the general public is looking forward to street delivery rather than trying to get a parking spot at the post office," he said. He said the town was growing to the point where lock boxes were causing congestion.

"This is the way it's going all over Canada," he said.

Improper bundling slows recycling

The two-month old recycling project is not without its problems.

Project chairman Erich Wagner says the response has been good, but his biggest concern is the way the paper is being bundled.

Because it's being dropped off at the bin behind the Beehive Workshop in all sorts of bags, from brown to plastic, a lot of extra hours have been needed to secure it properly.

Proper bundles

Such local groups as the air cadets, minor hockey, scouts and a group from St. Anthony's school are involved in workbooks to bundle the paper.

Wagner says the project is progressing well, but he's asking people who are dropping paper off to make sure they are bundled properly. "It will make our job so much easier," Wagner says.

Individuals and businesses dropping off paper are asked to use the bin behind the Beehive and not leave paper on the ground, or under the trailer parked at the Petro Canada service station.

14-year-old facing assault charges

Charges are pending against a 14-year-old junior high student following a recent incident at a Drayton Valley school.

According to the RCMP, a 14-year-old girl from H.W. Pickup went over to St. Anthony's school, where a fight followed. The 15-year-old from St. A's suffered facial bruising, a torn cartilage and was knocked out. She was kept in hospital overnight.

The incident was reported to RCMP by the vice-principal at St. Anthony's at 4:05 p.m. on Nov. 3.

The RCMP records also show the group of students from H.W. numbered 20 in all.

RCMP are continuing their investigation into the incident.

Firefighters survey the damage at the ICG Liquid Gas garage last week.

Explosion injures employee

A propane explosion at the ICG Liquid Gas garage last Monday morning blew out a garage door and sent one employee to an Edmonton burn centre.

The employee, Scott Daley, suffered superficial burns to his face and is expected to be released from hospital within a few days. ICG manager Alex Salhi said last Wednesday.

He said the explosion caused about $10,000 damage to the garage. Damage to the interior of a van parked in the garage has yet to be estimated, but will be paid for by the propane company.

The accident is being investigated by both Occupational Health and Safety and ICG's own safety department.

Salhi stressed his company's investigation will be a thorough one. "Accidents occur and we want to know why so they don't happen again."

We're getting closer, says Manning

By Frank Ryan

Preston Manning knows what he has to do Monday.

In order to represent the Yellowhead Riding, he has to defeat incumbent Joe Clark. "Our task is to pass him," Manning told 70 people at a public meeting last Wednesday night at the Legion.

"We started a long way back. We're getting close to passing Joe."

Manning also told the audience during the two-hour meeting he felt a small party, such as his, could make some progress if elected.

During a conference call earlier in the day, Manning told representatives of six newspapers in the Yellowhead Riding the free trade issue had hurt Clark badly.

The trip into Drayton Valley, which was his last before the Nov. 21 federal election, completed four sweeps through the riding. He has stops in Edson, Hinton, Jasper, Peers, Wabamun, Oneway, Grande Cache and Swan Hills this week.

If Manning wins the nod in Yellowhead, he has said all along he would consider moving from his home near St. Albert to a community in the riding. "I've had lots of offers from real estate people," he says.

A lively question-and-answer period followed his presentation last week with the free trade issue and abortion hogging the spotlight.

After saying the Reform Party was in favor of free and fair trade, Manning said, "I'm appalled at the way the debate was conducted. The three leaders have done a disservice on this issue."

"If you like free trade in principle...support the Reform Party. We are the only party not away on one extreme," he added.

One man in the crowd raised concerns of American service firms coming into Canada, specifically a place like Drayton Valley, and bringing in their own people, Manning, who did some door-knocking in the all section of the town prior to the public meeting said, "Our guys feel they can compete with anyone in the world."

Some other issues raised during the question-and-answer period included capital punishment, immigration, the national deficit, privatization of Petro Canada and other energy-related matters.

Bev Dekker accepts her award from chamber director Bob Olson.

FMHS math teacher named employee of the month

Teaching math often depends more on perspiration than inspiration but for Frank Maddock high school's Bev Dekker it's the rare instances that count the most.

"It was a junior high school student that inspired me to go into math," says Dekker, recently named September's Employee of the Month by the chamber of commerce.

"I suppose if I inspire one or two students it makes the job worthwhile."

Dekker says she was surprised to win the award, mainly because she doesn't consider herself as simply an employee. "It's not a nine-to-five job."

After the initial surprise, "I thought, 'why not?'" recalls Dekker. "I know many teachers who work really hard and do a lot for their students...but I'm very pleased just the same."

Born in Westlock, the 13-year veteran of the teaching profession earned her master's degree from the University of Alberta. She has taught at Frank Maddock since 1980.

Dekker maintains she has no other aspirations other than to continue her work in the classroom.

"What I like best is presenting the material to the students in a way they would enjoy it and learn it."

Keeping the classroom setting as informal as possible has proven to be a successful teaching technique, she says.

"I don't feel I'm above the kids. I try and work at the same level as them."

The teacher stresses that interacting with the students is, above all else, her biggest and satisfying challenge.

"I like working with the students," Dekker says. "They can be trying at times but they do make it worthwhile."

Slippery road conditions will test motorists

A local RCMP officer says the first major snowfall of the year will be a big test for Drayton Valley motorists.

"The first snowfall will bring slippery road conditions," said Cpl. Tim Vatanianuk last Wednesday. "People will have to adapt quickly."

Stressed motorists should use "extreme caution" and reduce their driving speeds as soon as the snow hits.

Another problem for snow-shocked drivers will be visibility, said Vatanianuk, who pointed out motorists sometimes lack precision when it comes to cleaning their windows.

The corporal says people have occasionally been known to drive while their visibility is at least partially impaired by snow or frost.

Drivers should also exercise caution when passing through school zones, Vatanianuk added. "Kids are usually bundled up so much they may not be able to hear or see the traffic." Finally, Vatanianuk reminded winter-warrior motorists to ensure their tires are up to winter driving specifications.

Reform Party leader Preston Manning was asked last week what his campaign costs would total.

But before he had a chance to answer, he accidentally disconnected the phone, which was part of a conference call with six newspapers in the Yellowhead Riding.

When contacted later, Manning just laughed off the incident. However, he still didn't reveal his campaign costs.

Chamber awards farmers

In an effort to recognize the contribution of agriculture in the area, the chamber of commerce will be unveiling its first ever farm family award at its annual general meeting Nov. 29.

The agricultural society has established a committee to survey potential candidates for the award.

"We're letting the rural people know that we're thinking about them and that we care about them," said chamber director Ann Krawchuk.

The farm family award is planned to be a rural equivalent to the Citizen of the Year award handed out on an annual basis by the chamber.

Krawchuk said the chamber wants to lighten its profile in the outlying district through programs such as the farm award.

She added the nominations committee will be obtaining assistance from Edmonton Northlands is an attempt to establish criteria for the award. Northlands has been recognizing the contribution of family farms in Alberta for a number of years.

Dear Constituents,

This election is about performance and our future. As you know our P.C. Government has delivered on its promises. We have seen performance in economic growth, reduced deficit, job creation and assistance among others. This kind of positive record needs another term to do even more.

The opportunity we have now to shape our future into one of involved unity and strength is only possible by re-electing the P.C. party. With continued good government, the Free Trade Agreement makes it possible for all of us to move into the 1990s with a positive economic environment. Good competitive opportunities will contribute to our economy. As this happens then good quality services can be provided to all aspects of our society. I want to be a part of this unique step forward as your representative.

Now more than ever it is important for you to come and register your support by voting on November 21st for Willie Littlechild and the Progressive Conservative Party of Canada.

Two councils face decisions

There have been some healthy signs emerging from Town council and Brazeau MD council meetings in past months.

On more than one occasion councillors have been in disagreement with one another and are not always quick to accept the recommendations made by their administration staff.

Tax issues, such as the Schwandt and Duperron situations, are evidence of this. In the first instance Deputy Mayor Jean Saunders had to cast the tie-breaking vote.

Another 'people' issue that council has given serious thought on is the mobile home park that could tie into a major road in to West Valley Park. Following receipt of a second petition on traffic the sports centre will generate, council felt a complete study of the situation was necessary.

Town council has also expressed their concern about apparent interference by the area MLA and Councillor Dave Lundberg came out in defence of the many motorists complaining about high gasoline prices.

Minor hockey saw a complete about-face by council in regards to building an outdoor rink. Just when it looked like minor hockey was going to have to raise funds for the necessary materials and do all the labor, council jumped in and said they had approached the contractor for the sports centre to do the actual work.

In the same breath, council decided to assist minor hockey and build the storage lockers under the seating area.

Two other 'issues' they have recently decided to take a look at are concerns about the dust and noise being generated from the mill and the possible establishment of an FCSS in town.

The MD, while limited in councillors, has demonstrated their desire to do things the county never seems to get around to.

At a recent meeting administration came up with a recommendation to increase the speed limit through Violet Grove and along the Lodgepole highway.

Reeve Henry Rondeau who lives near Lodgepole, had strong objections to both proposals. Both of them were supported by the other two councillors.

At the same time these healthy signs have been emerging from council, there undoubtedly have been decisions made that people don't like. But, these two councils are no different than any others in this respect.

Why can't all schools hold interviews on the same day?

Schools make me so MAD sometimes.

For instance, students at Frank Maddock high school and Evergreen elementary were off last Thursday because of parent-teacher interviews.

That was bad enough but if you just happened to have kids attending H.W. Pickup, they were still in class because their report cards don't come out until Nov. 18. Then, they will likely get a day of classes off for parent-teacher interviews while the other schools are in session.

Why don't report cards for all four public schools in town come out at the same time so the parent-teacher interviews could be the same day?

If that's not bad enough, when did the County of Parkland start holding their parent-teacher interviews during the day? Why can't they all be held in the evening?

What about the working mother? If they

Frankly Speaking

By Frank Ryan

have students at FMHS and Evergreen they only have a couple hours at night. It's either that or book some time off during the day.

Circle Monday, Nov. 21 on your calendar. That's the day Canadians go to the polls and it's also the day supermailboxes come on stream in Drayton Valley.

Two of the biggest improvements at the new Drayton Sports Centre are the expanded lobby and the new dressing room/washrooms.

Unfortunately, the town doesn't have the money to provide furnishings in the lobby. So unless someone comes up with $5,000 or so for benches or chairs, spectators will have to stand.

Whatever, it's a whole lot better than the old arena.

We're certainly looking forward to the day The Rig opens.

The Rig, located in the Derrick Mall, was a popular hangout for teens and billiard players.

This type of facility is desperately needed in our town. A survey of teens two years ago indicated The Rig was a popular place.

Canadians urged to take closer look at trade deal

Dear Editor,

Take a close look at the "free" trade deal before you vote this election.

Most Canadians agree that trade with the United States is very important to our economy — and that we want it to continue and flourish with a minimum of barriers.

In this election we're hearing a lot about the Conservative government's free trade agreement with the U.S. But voters should be very clear about one thing: There is a big difference between freer trade in principle, and this particular "free" trade deal.

Instead of just listening to all the emotional rhetoric about freer trade, one only hopes that Canadians will look at the facts concerning this particular deal. One excellent source of unbiased and informed analysis is Judge Marjorie Bowker's review — available from Edmonton book stores. She is one of a growing number of informed Canadians who, while they might support freer trade, once they examine the ramifications of implementing this deal, conclude strongly that this agreement is not in our best interest.

Nearly $30 million of our federal tax money is being used to sell the deal. Along with doom and gloom scare-mongering and name-calling in recent weeks, all of this glossy and very biased literature forms part of a campaign by the current government to cash in on general support for freer trade.

Letters

This of course is meant to distract us from examining the detailed faults of this particular deal, because, upon close examination, most independent observers are concluding that we gave up far more than we got in return.

Recently the provincial government has joined in this orgy of propaganda, issuing "Straight Talk on Free Trade." Some of the talk is pretty crooked. For example, the province states that it didn't give up control over energy resources. It states clearly in article 904 that we cannot reduce the proportion of total export shipments of a specific energy good going to the U.S. below the average share that we have been shipping them in the last three years.

And we can't sell energy to Albertans for any less than we sell it to Americans.

A recent report by the province's Energy Resources Conservation Board (funded half by the provincial government and half by the oil industry) makes it pretty clear that we don't need free trade for a healthy energy economy.

Report ERCB 88-C notes that "U.S. oil and gas productive capacity continues to decline, increasing demand for Canadian hydrocarbons." It also identifies the major barriers to energy development have nothing to do with trade restrictions: "By mid 1987 export restrictions had been largely removed."

A healthy oil economy is based on price, and there is nothing in this deal which will increase price. In fact, if anything the deal will keep prices lower once we get to the point where hydrocarbons are again in short supply and the U.S. really needs our oil.

Look into some more of the facts yourself, and don't get

"sold" on a few nice ideas which are essentially irrelevant to the reality of this particular trade deal.

Good service gets tips

Dear Editor:

I read with interest your article "Tips less than Spec-tacular" in the Nov. 1 copy of The Western Review.

I sympathize with waitresses who are dependent on this extra gratuity, but I don't think it's fair.

Tips were initiated last I understand to show gratitude for good service. Perhaps these girls should take another look at the service they are providing to see if it is in direct proportion to the tip they receive. Most times, the better the service, the better the tip.

Drayton Valley has some great restaurants. They also have some wonderful waitresses, but I'm sorry to say, in some places, there is still room for improved service.

So girls, on your next shift, try your darndest to improve on your service and I'm sure your tip will reflect the change.

'Free trade agreement nothing more than a sellout'

Dear Editor,

Granting that Canadian voters did not know what they were doing when they elected Mulroney, and that he has only imagined he knew what he was doing ever since, one can almost feel a little sorry for the poor fellow, up to the point where he proposes to trade away our birthright for a mess of pottage.

His invitation to unlimited U.S. investment into Canada is nothing else but a sell-out, and why?

One does not need to be a great student of world affairs to know it is a fact that, where American interests exist, anywhere in the world, the American government regards itself ethically entitled to protect those interests, by force, if necessary.

Where does that leave Mulroney, the great 'nation builder'? And where does that leave the multitude of Canadian citizens that do not share his enthusiasm for ingratiation?

Shall we vote for him and find out? Shall we just sigh, and concede that the whole thing is in the lap of the gods, one namely the god Mammon, or shall we go to the polls on Nov. 21, and make your votes say: 'No, thank you Mr. Mulroney, we do not have the right to make the free trade deal without a mandate, and you do not have one.'

Let us ponder, for a moment on the motives of Peter Laughed, a man who toiled diligently in the interest of American oil companies throughout his tenure as premier of Alberta, while at the same time shamefully neglected to monitor business concerns that were operating in a questionable manner. A man who was fussy enough to step aside when it became obvious the garbage was about to hit the fan, and leave Getty holding the bag. Laughed is an avid advocate of the free trade deal... need we ask why?

One final note on Wilson's so-called tax reform. Yes, there is more than one way to skin a cat but there is no way the cat is going to like it. The word 'reform' sounds so much better than the word 'gouge', does it not?

More questions raised than answered

Dear Editor,

The Mulroney government has spent over $30 million dollars to 'promote' rather than 'explain' the Canada-U.S. trade agreement.

The FTA has been made 'the' issue of this election but I find all the attention it has received has led to more questions and fewer answers.

We have been told by the Conservatives the FTA is good for Canada and Canadians but we have not been told how. Presently $2 billion is collected annually from tariffs on U.S. goods crossing the border but no mention has been made as to how this income will be replaced. Speculation is that we will face a federal sales tax to regenerate lost tariff income.

The most recent scare tactic is the implication that without FTA our economy will crumble. Canadians will lose the jobs they presently have and foreign investors will shy away from our deflated dollar and higher interest rates; unwilling to take a chance with a country populated by people who instigated their own recession.

I feel the Mulroney government is trying to blackmail us with their tales of gloom as a last-ditch effort to undermine the growing opposition to the FTA. After all, we have been doing reasonably well without free trade so far.

The Americans have been noticeably quiet on the subject of free trade. They did, however, sign the agreement with little resistance and they are not known for their economic generosity toward other countries.

William Randolph Hurst, editor-in-chief of the Hurst Newspaper Syndicate, has said: 'The momentous move towards uniting the two countries economically is very gratifying to me. For more than a decade my Pop urged in his newspapers that Canada become a part of the U.S.' Does this American perspective reflect what the deal really offers us?

While free trade in itself may not be a bad idea, I believe the agreement presently before us is shrouded by too many grey areas and questions to be regarded as a good 'deal' for Canada.

Hines takes third in saddle bronc

Drayton Valley's Clayton Hines had to settle for third place in the saddle bronc competition at the Canadian rodeo finals in Edmonton last week.

John Smith of Rimbey won the title with 115 points, followed by Duane Daines of Innisfail with 110 and Hines with 90.

Hines didn't record any top marks early in the competition but won his first go-around Saturday and placed second on Sunday to move up in the standings.

New paramedic brings technical skills to area

By Steve Fletcher

The baby's heart had stopped beating. There were no vital signs. The six-week-old boy had asphyxiated himself with his own vomit.

Larry Edwards, a paramedic-in-training with 10 days to go before his graduation from SAIT, found himself in one of those situations where seconds can mean the difference between life and death.

Edwards worked quickly, managing to get the young baby's heart pumping blood again before they reached hospital. For Edwards, the resuscitation exemplifies why his job is all about. For the baby, it meant unknowingly beating the odds: only a little more than one per cent of cardiac-arrest victims survive the ordeal.

"If we hadn't been there the kid wouldn't have made it," says Edwards of incident in 1983 which occurred while he was completing his final practicum.

Four months ago, Edwards became Drayton Valley's first paramedic. His arrival in July, which followed Associated Ambulance's acquisition of the local service, puts the town on the medical map as one of the few small-town communities served by a paramedic.

Associated Ambulance has "worked hard at trying to upgrade rural services," says Edwards. "More (paramedics) are needed in rural areas than in the cities because of the distances involved."

A former Nanton resident who for 15 years worked as a diesel mechanic, Edwards is qualified to provide advanced life support — meaning his ambulance is specially-equipped in an effort to improve the survival rate of heart patients.

"The paramedic profession was initially developed in the States for this reason," Edwards points out. "To try and bring up the survival rate on the streets."

Increasing the survival rate for victims of cardiac arrest is the toughest challenge facing paramedics today, especially when one realizes the first four to six minutes are considered the most crucial. A heart that ceases longer than that almost certainly means brain damage or death for the victim.

"The statistics say paramedics do save lives," asserts Edwards. Prior to the advent of the paramedical system, no one ever survived cardiac arrest outside of a hospital setting. Paramedics, who generally spend two years at school, are more highly-trained and can perform more medical tasks than their emergency medical technician counterparts.

Bill McCormack, senior EMT in Drayton Valley, says the arrival of a paramedic in town will be beneficial not only to the community but to the five EMTs stationed here as well.

"We, as EMTs, are a lot more better off," he maintains. "Edwards is bringing his knowledge to us and we'll be able to learn new procedures."

Edwards says there are tentative plans to bring in a second paramedic if the volume of calls warrants it.

"In a small town, it would certainly be a rarity if there were two paramedics."

Immigration opposed by COR's Hope

Confederation of Regions Yellowhead candidate Peter Hope is standing behind statements he made recently about restricting immigration to Caucasians.

"If you think you can mix races, just look at Lebanon and Israel," said Hope during a campaign stop in Drayton Valley.

Hope was heckled during the all-candidates forum at the Rec Plex Oct. 24 when he called for the adoption of tougher immigration laws to prohibit entry into Canada to all but those of European heritage.

"The establishment jumped on me," said Hope about his experience at the forum. "As far as I'm concerned, I've been more or less chastized for my views."

Hope singled out the media for its preoccupation with only a small portion of his election platform. "My views on the national debt have never been mentioned."

Nevertheless, Hope maintained he'll continue to base his campaign on two emotionally-charged issues: Canada's current immigration policy and bilingualism.

Derrick Club fighter pummels first opponent

About 70 fighters from across the province converged on the Rec Plex last weekend to test their skills at a Bronze Gloves boxing tournament.

The two-day journey showcased two local boxers from the Derrick Boxing Club who qualified for Bronze Gloves competition — each having less than four fights behind them.

For Ken MacKenzie, 18, the event marked his debut performance in the ring. And the light-heavyweight didn't disappoint the hometown fans. After taking a pummeling from the scaphy Derrick club boxer, MacKenzie's opponent, Jason Cardinal of Ardmore, retired from the light midway through the second round.

The other local fighter, Mark Rozo, 24, didn't have it as easy. The heavyweight had to contend with a super-heavyweight opponent in a make-up bout on Saturday night.

Rozo went one round with the heavier fighter before the bout was stopped. Derrick club head coach Lawrence Dupperon said he was "really pleased with the attendance" at this year's tourney. It's the fourth time the local club has hosted a Bronze Gloves event, and Dupperon noted he's already booked the Rec Plex in hopes that his club is allotted another tourney next year.

About 25 of the 33 boxing clubs in Alberta sent representatives to the Drayton Valley competition. In all, about 40 fights took place throughout the weekend. Dupperon said his club will be sending three fighters to a journey in Fort Saskatchewan this weekend. The card, for experienced junior fighters, will pit Alberta boxers against their Saskatchewan counterparts.

Noon-hour hockey popular as recreational pastime

By Belinda Atkinson

A hockey stick has become a popular alternative to the for according to arena manager Darren Urkevich. Urkevich said 18 to 20 hockey players sign up daily for noon-hour hockey at the Drayton Sports Centre.

For $2 per game or $60 for a season's pass, the men skip lunch and play a quick game of hockey.

Urkevich said the program ran four days per week last year but the schedule has now expanded to every weekday. He said anyone can join in and it's not necessary to be a regular.

"We get all kinds of people. A few salesmen drop in when they're working in the area," he said. Urkevich explained that different teams are made up everyday and an overall season's score isn't kept.

"No, it's just for fun," he said. "If we don't have enough men for a goalie then we just turn the nets around and play," he continued.

Anyone interested in sacrificing the pasta for a puck, contact Darren Urkevich at the Drayton Sports Centre.

Local team wins

Four goals by Mike Fort powered the Drayton Valley Elks to a 9-3 win over Evansburg last Wednesday night in Wild Rose Central Hockey League action.

Craig Pinkski chipped in with a two-goal effort with Kent McKechnie, Brad Beaver and Daryl Winter adding singles.

Winter also collected three assists with Scott McKechnie, Shelby Jorgenson and Ken Plante setting up two goals each.

Twenty-three penalties were called in the game with 13 minors and a major going to the Elks.

The win was the Elks' second in league play and one loss.

Atoms, pee wees hold tourney

Mothers and fathers were in abundance at the Drayton Sports Centre last weekend as they cheered on their charges in the annual atompee wee hockey tournament.

Braidsor Construction went the farthest of all the local clubs involved. The atoms team skated its way to the A final before dropping a 9-4 decision to Thorsby — a club that played hard at both ends of the rink.

In the pee wee A final, Calmar got by Warburg 4-2. In the B final, Drayton Valley clubs Hi West and Flinty club 4-2. Only four clubs participated in the pee wee tourney this year.

In atom team action, Leduc captured the B final with a 4-3 win over Evansburg. Local team Sunshine Ford outshone Devon with a 3-1 score to take the C final.

John Whelan, one of Braidsor's coaches, said the atoms' half of the tourney proved to be fairly competitive as "most of the games were close." Each of the six participating teams played three games during the weekend.

Hi-West coach Dave Davis said three teams dropped out of the pee wee tourney within five days of the tourney's start. He added that organizers managed to recruit Warburg to post four clubs in the event.

One positive aspect of the sudden shortage of pee wee teams was that the remaining clubs played four games instead of three.

Davis said ice time was a key concern of his, noting Hi-West has not yet played a league game because of the delay in the construction of the new arena.

The local branch of the Royal Canadian Legion again sponsored the pee wee portion of the tournament. The atoms depend on donations from a number of corporate sponsors.

Winning streak ends

The Pile Base Pee Wee Rangers had a tough weekend on the road, ending their unbeaten streak by dropping two out of three games.

In Ardrossan on Friday, the Strathcona Hawks flew to a 4-0 lead in the first period. In the second, Greg Thompson found the mark with a little help from Bryson Kozek and the Rangers pulled together and battled to a 5-1 final score.

The Rangers met Wetaskiwin on neutral ice in Warburg Saturday. A quick blast in the third period ruined Errol Steele's shutout but the game was all Drayton Valley as they coasted to a 7-1 victory.

The marksmen were Travis Brigley (two goals, one

Rocky Mountain House dealt the Rangers their first league loss Sunday. It was a see-saw battle with Drayton Valley getting the short end of a 7-5 final. Travis Brigley, Trevor DePaigs, Robie Smashuk, Ian Cathers and Trent Williams notched the goals.

The boys will be pumping gas at the Petro-Canada service station on Saturday and Sunday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. with all profits donated to the Rangers' tournament in Denver, Colorado in February.

Lariettes blast Thorsby on weekend

The Lariettes girls' hockey team played two games on Sunday, skating to a win and a tie.

The Lariettes blasted Thorsby 8-2, with Drayton

Valley goals coming from Mandy Nelson (a hat trick), Terri Kwiatkowski (four goals), and Stephanie Cartwright (one goal).

The Lariettes also played the Mayerthorpe Majors to a 4-4 deadlock on Sunday. The Drayton Valley sharpshooters were Terri Kwiatkowski (two), Kerry Bannan and Helen Christensen.

Bantams downed 9-4

Drayton Valley was downed 9-4 in bantam hockey action in Stony Plain on the weekend.

Scoring for Drayton Valley were Kevin Dusterhoft (two goals), James Jelinak and Todd Janzen.

Twenty-two rinks sign up for mixed curling league

The curling season is under way in Drayton Valley. Club president Bruce Clemmer says registrations are up slightly over last season.

Twenty-two rinks have signed up in the Monday mixed league with another 22 in the Tuesday men's. There are eight rinks in the ladies' Tuesday afternoon league and another 16 in the evening.

The Thursday open circuit is split into two leagues of eight rinks each.

A spare list has been posted at the rink for anyone interested in playing a few games.

The first bonspiel on the local scene is booked for Nov. 25-26. It will be a one-on-one affair.

Instead of the usual rink format, this Friday night, all day, Saturday event, will feature only one curler against his opponent. All games will be six ends each, curler will throw four rocks per end and no sleeping will be allowed.

Sign up for this event at the rink. The spiel can only accommodate 64 people. The O'Brien's (Jan. 13-15) is the first mix or solo of the year with the interclub the following weekend. The men's open is scheduled for Feb. 17-19 followed the next weekend by the ladies. The schedule is set for March 17-19. So far 17 bonspiels have been booked for the Drayton Valley curling club. The schedule is posted at the rink.

Provost man takes award

Eimer Schelke of Provost, who has devoted more than 30 years to minor baseball, is the 1988 recipient of the prestigious Carling O'Keefe award of merit.

The 61-year-old former coach and executive member is the 18th winner of the top individual award presented annually for amateur baseball in Alberta.

The award, instituted in 1958, recognizes significant service to the sport.

"No person has done more in the past two decades to provide opportunities for young people to play baseball in east-central Alberta," Ron Hayter, chairman of the awards committee said.

"In particular, he put his home town of Provost on the map," Hayter added.

He spearheaded the growth of the Provost minor baseball program into one of the best in the province and he was instrumental in the development of first class playing facilities in this community of fewer than 2000.

Bull Rider

By Frank Pavlick
Canada's Sports Poet

A Rodeo Contest of bull versus man,
They practice by riding wherever they can,
150 or more days a year,
Just spurs and a rope, short and blue jeans for gear
A living of jumping and kicks as a mule,
A cowboy is tough and a bull is no fool.
Try not to get stepped on or hooked in the ride,
While calling on courage that comes from inside
Of course there are moments of danger and strife,
Those times when a clown may indeed save a life.
X section of injuries, all you can name,
Crushed ribs, broken bones, feel a part of the game
But one thing for sure, by the time it all ends,
Bull riders will always have lots of close friends
And one day in Heaven, the Man will inquire,
What is it you bull riders mostly desire,
They'll answer, no question, to make their life full,
A nice sunny day and a high kickin' bull

Mission work more than faith

By Helinda Atkinson
 off the jungles of Africa and the streets of Paris, Drayton Valley seems an odd place to carry on missionary work.

But for Don and Elma Dirks, the Alliance Church's second annual Missions Conference held last week, was appropriate as a medium to relate 25 years of field work. The Dirks wanted to explain how contributions have helped the people of Africa and France, make a plea for more funding, and, hopefully, draw interest to the demanding but rewarding work.

The Dirks began their overseas work in a small government post known as Moudia, in the Republic of Gabon, Africa.

The community — set 500 km into interior jungle adjacent to the equator — could, at times, reach 110 F degrees in the shade.

He explained that 1960, the year of their arrival, was a time of transition between European political and military power and an eventual coup d'état in 1964 which brought the house arrest of many political prisoners. The community became caught in the unrest.

"The tribal chief stopped a mob that was coming to get us," Don said. "He said they would pass over his dead body."

He explained the chief, who wielded all authority in the region, was a regular visitor to church service and a friend.

Despite dangers and the availability of few modern conveniences, the Dirks stayed in Gabon for 14 years. "We had a very close and beautiful relationship with the people," said Elma.

"I don't think we really sacrificed anything," they agreed.

Don noted cultural differences such as the women's role to work and the men's to sit at home, but he said living with them was never a strain.

They had a buoyant spirit. They were easy to joke with, he continued.

As the mission expanded, Don became field director to the missionaries who had to be trained in the ways and dialects of the African people. Then, in 1973, the Dirks left to mutual sadness. "It was like they were mourning our leaving," said Elma.

In 1974, they began a 14-year mission in Paris, France, where the two per cent Protestant affiliation plays a distant third to the 84 per cent Catholic majority and six per cent Moslem.

France's open-arm policy toward survivors of the Vietnam conflict kept Alliance and other missionaries extremely busy.

We opened a refugee welcome centre and I was involved in a tremendous amount of public relations work," Don said.

There was so much to do legally, so many administrative details. Aside from the bureaucratic read tape and job placement, the missionaries worked to ease the emotional adjustment from Vietnam and Cambodia to France.

The couple was touring separately — Don in the U.S. and Elma in Alberta. They reposed in Drayton Valley and will continue touring for the next three weeks.

Don will return to theological studies but the eventual goal is to return to missionary work.

Grant applications received

Six applications have been received for the town's $5,000 Community Recreation grant.

The applications will be discussed by members of the recreation board later this month with their recommendations going to council.

Some of the $5,000 has already been spent. The recreation board contributed $300 on their Halloween night activities at the Rec Plex.

There is also a good chance all the money will not be doled out. In past years, some funds have been held back and used for special events as they come up later in the year.

Advance polls open today

An advance poll for the upcoming federal election will be held today (Tuesday, Nov. 15).

The advance poll will be open from noon to 8 p.m. at the Royal Canadian Legion in Drayton Valley.

On election day, Monday, Nov. 21, the polls will be open from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Tax system changes increase farming complexities

More farmers will be visiting accountants in the future as a result of changes to the tax system, predicts District 1 Agriculturalist Gerald Laarhuis.

For farmers, the reforms increase complexity—it's advisable they obtain assistance from professional accountants," said Laarhuis.

Those facing the greatest impact from the changes include farmers who claim farm losses on off farm income, and those who use purchased inventory to channel a loss, said Laarhuis.

Government drops compulsory astronomy courses

"Wow, what a show."

Looking up at the stars.

By Belinda Atkinson
A planetarium may be the only place left where children can learn about the space sciences, according to Mobile Planetarium operator Raymond Kluthe.

Kluthe explained the government recently transferred astronomy from a compulsory part of grades 4 and 8 to an option which is decided by the teacher.

"If teachers aren't particularly interested in astronomy then chances are they'll be more likely to skip that unit," Kluthe said.

"It's an unfortunate move on the government's part because everyone should have knowledge of astronomy," he said. "Astronomy and space science are the waves of the future."

Kluthe explained space exploration may be a natural and necessary step to compensate for the continual depletion of the earth's natural resources.

"Space science has moved from the abstract realm to the realistic realm," he said.

Kluthe explained that a logical step, after initial exploration, would be to mine the mineral rich asteroids near the surface of Mars.

"I'm crossing my fingers that I'll see people land on Mars," he said.

With all the talk on free trade, Kluthe said a primary astronomy education is vital if Canadians are to compete with Americans for jobs in this area of science.

In the U.S. it's a different story. Many schools have their own planetariums and almost every child in the states is exposed to the space sciences.

While students in urban areas can visit their local planetariums, Kluthe is concerned that urban children may never develop an interest simply because of the lack of facilities.

"That's one of the primary reasons the Mobile Planetarium was started," he said, "to help develop an interest."

Kids just can't sit still up," he said of the 60-minute show. The Mobile Planetarium was recently acquired by the Edmonton Space Sciences Foundation as an extension of the Edmonton Space Sciences Centre.

Funded by Alberta Treasury Branches and the federal government, the program operates in rural communities throughout the province.

The planetarium consists of an inflatable dome which holds 25 adults or 30 children, a miniature star projector, house lights for different effects, slide and special effects projectors and a tape deck.

Kluthe said when not on tour, the operators are constantly updating and improving the program to make it more interesting and informative.

Operator Raymond Kluthe sets miniature star projector for next show.

Space show a learning experience

"No, those are particles of rock covered in ice," he replies.

"I can see Orion now," the boy says again. "No, Orion still isn't up there."

The show continues with on surface photographs of Jupiter taken by an unmanned robot spacecraft. He says the spacecraft was sent to find evidence of life that may have evolved when water was present.

"It looks like Earth billions of years ago," he says. "The most complex life possible would have been plant life."

But he adds that no fossils have been found to back the theory.

He then shows a satellite photograph of Mars and says, although there are no lifeforms presently, future exploration could change that.

The children ask numerous questions and Kluthe ends just as many misconceptions. The explorers of BC return to their classrooms and Kluthe reads the planetarium for the next group. The Mobile Planetarium will be available to classes daily and to the general public every evening until Nov. 23.

Voyages into deep space begin nightly at 7:30 p.m. in the band room behind H.W. Pick up

Farm structure plans available

Farmers looking for building plans on virtually every type of farm structure or livestock handling system should look to Alberta Agriculture's building plan service for ideas and blueprints.

The plan service, co-ordinated by Dennis Darby of Lethbridge, the provincial farm structures engineer, has just published its most recent directory of building plans available from the department.

The two-page fact sheet, which includes an order form, lists the titles of more than 250 building items covering eight major farming enterprises.

Designs are available for beef, dairy cattle, swine, sheep and poultry housing; fruit and vegetable buildings; grain, forage and feed storage; special structures such as barns for riding horses or farm workshops.

Along with plans for actual buildings, the service also provides designs for a wide range of equipment and building components including loading chutes, feed carts, larrowing stalls, shearing tables, poultry nests, ventilation systems, feed bins and many others.

Don't Confuse Free Trade...

with a Seriously Flawed Trade Deal

The Conservative Government has negotiated a trade deal with the United States. The more that Canadians learn about the Deal, the more they don't like it.

WHAT DO WE GAIN?

*Eighty percent of U.S. - Canada Trade is currently free of tariffs. The deal would phase out tariffs on the other 20%.

*Some U.S. imports would be cheaper (but still not as cheap as imports from Japan, China, Korea, etc.)

*Up to 25,000 jobs a year might be created (Keep in mind that the Canadian economy normally creates about 250,000 jobs a year on its own, anyway.) Canada currently has over 2 million unemployed.

*Some Big Business will increase profit and expand. Some will also move to the States, be forced out of business and/or be taken over by U.S. companies. Who knows how many jobs we'd lose in the long term?

THIS ELECTION IS ABOUT A "FREE TRADE DEAL THAT ISN'T!" Where Do The Parties Stand?

ON NOVEMBER 21 - USE YOUR VOTE TO DEFEAT A LOUSY DEAL!
VOTE NO DEAL!
AND GIVE CANADA A CHANCE TO DEVELOP MEANINGFUL AND SECURE FREE TRADE THAT'S GOOD FOR ALL OF US!

AND IF WE REJECT THE DEAL?

So what? Seriously, the U.S. needs our energy and our trade, and over 80% of our trade is already tariff free.

With our current trade arrangements, we're being doing pretty well - chalking up huge surpluses and enjoying a strong economy and we didn't get full protection from U.S. protectionism!

We can try some new things - like expanding trade with the stronger and growing economies of the Pacific countries, and supporting policies which allow us to process our natural resources here in Canada instead of handing the raw materials over cheap to everyone else to get the jobs and profits! Freer Trade doesn't mean letting the U.S. in for free, or giving up our resources for (almost) free.

A leaked directive from the Prime Minister's Office shows just how worried the Government has been that we might find out too many facts about the deal.

"Our strategy should rely less on educating the general public than on getting across the message that the trade initiative is a good idea.

In other words a selling job."

So far they've spent almost $30 million making sure we are sold, not educated about the deal.

Most of us support free trade in principle.

Forget about the principle! What are the FACTS?

What we lose far outweighs what we gain.

WHAT WOULD WE LOSE?

*The biggest trade barriers - countervailing duties - would not be eliminated by this deal (FTA, Ch. 10, esp. article 1907)

*Environmental protection measures and social programmes WERE omitted from the deal, but they WERE NOT exempted from future negotiations, unlike energy and military subsidies. This means they are vulnerable to attack by the U.S. as "unfair subsidies" over the next 7 years allowed for negotiations when we try to agree on what is a fair or unfair subsidy (FTA, Chapter 10 & 21)

*We would lose the ability to sell our resources, including energy, to ourselves at a price lower than export prices to the U.S. And even in times of shortage, we would be forced to sell the same proportion of our resources to the U.S. as we were before shortages. That's why we lose control over energy. (FTA, Article 904)

*U.S. companies would be free to come into Canada and buy - without conditions - almost any Canadian company. They could acquire markets and resources, and then move the company (along with the jobs) to the States or wherever else it suits them. Or they could simply bring up their own people to do the work for as long as they want. (FTA, Chapter 15 & articles 1602, 1603)

*Canadian banks are governed by regulations intended to protect consumers from unfair charges. These would not apply to U.S. banks which would be free to operate in Canada (FTA, Ch 17)

*Water is ~~not~~ covered in this agreement; more importantly it is not exempted from trade as were other select goods. It will be difficult for Canada to resist growing U.S. pressure to divert our water southward. Experts on trade & water legislation have recently concluded that, in spite of any federal laws passed later, our water is seriously at risk (Don Gamble Rawson Academy)

*We did not get a fair or legally binding mechanism for resolving trade disputes and claims of unfair trading practices. U.S. Trade Law would be the final judge of disputes threatening our exports. (FTA, Ch. 18 & 19)

"The list goes on and on, but there's only so much room on the scale. Don't take our word for it. READ it yourself!"

AMA recommends stricter enforcement

Additional measures are necessary if extra-long trucks are to continue mixing safely with passenger vehicles on certain two lane highways in the province, says J. In Hansen, chairman of the board of governors of the Alberta Motor Association (AMA).

Stricter enforcement of trucking regulations, upgrading of designated two lane highways, more visible signage on trucks over 25 metres (82 feet) in length, and closer coordination of provincial safety initiatives were the measures recommended by the AMA chairman at a recent news conference.

"Close government supervision of what the industry itself calls truck trains has made it possible for them to maintain a good safety record," said Hansen. In the past year, at our urging, the government has put in place even stricter permit conditions, required additional training for operators of extra length units and pledged no increase in the designated routes on which they may operate.

"We also applauded the government on the leading role it played in developing the National Safety Code for truckers. But we ask the government now to step up its enforcement efforts to ensure the code works to the benefit of all road users, the majority of whom are private motorists in vehicles much smaller and lighter than the big rigs.

We also ask the government to place a high priority on upgrading the two lane highways where these truck trains mix with private vehicles.

And extra length trucks should have signs on their tailgates to warn motorists they are overtaking a unit more than 25 metres long.

"Finally, the Council of Ministers of Transportation should standardize collision reporting across the country, so the true effect of safety initiatives can be determined," Hansen concluded.

The AMA last year advised the government of its concerns regarding the safety of Rocky Mountain Doubles, extra length trucks measuring up to 29 metres (95 feet), operating on designated two lane highways. Representing 380,000 members in the province the AMA will take its additional safety proposals to the provincial government later this year.

Meanwhile, renovations are under way in the video pool hall exercise gym section of the building located at the south end of the mall.

Canada's economic future depends on trade with Americans

Dear Editor,
Within six days Canada will embark on electing a new government in Ottawa. Unfortunately the only issue which is at the forefront has been the free trade agreement.

The election of 1988 will be known solely as a referendum on free trade. Much has been said about the negative impart of the agreement and so I am writing to ask readers to assess the fundamental impact that your vote will have on Nov. 21.

This is not a letter asking for Conservative party votes, but questions the wisdom of abandoning an agreement which leads Canadians into the 21st century.

Canada is an exporting nation. Our growth in the future depends solely on our ability to compete in a very aggressive and dynamic international market.

Canadian business is becoming much better at overcoming obstacles to international sales. Trading networks have been established to access markets in Europe, Australia, Russia, China and the rest of the Orient.

Trade delegations seek ties and trade arrangements which will benefit the flow of goods, services and capital to and from Canada. The success of Canadian business leads to increased prosperity at home through job creation, increased Canadian equity, a greater ability to pay taxes and afford a Canadian a very high standard of living.

It is through this tax base that Canadians can afford the social network that we all have to treasure. We cannot continue to have this network if our gross national product cannot be maintained and expanded.

New living Canadians is an opportunity to have open access and mutual consideration of interests with our largest trading partner. Protectionist movements in the United States want to close our border to all but our raw materials.

Our economy would be stifled in secondary industries of food processing, telecommunications, energy, technology and forestry products to allow domestic American industry to come to struggle.

This leads to higher costs on both sides of the border reduced equities and reduced taxes for the governments that want to expand social programs, clean up the environment or care for the homeless.

Dealing with the Americans in an open and honest fashion can only lead to prosperity with our largest trading partner and southern neighbor.

Make your vote count on Nov. 21

Election downplays abortion

Dear Editor,

The federal election is just hours away. Unfortunately the pre-elect campaign has focused almost exclusively on the free trade issue. As a nation, we will exist (probably) whether or not we have a free trade agreement.

The issue most politicians have backed away from, describing it as emotional or a feminist issue, is one of justice, abortion.

Our society cannot afford to condone violence by permitting abortion. Legal violence against one innocent life opens the way to more violence in families, institutions and society. We cannot be disinterested, distant or casual because the very principles by which we live and are governed are threatened.

Our nation and society is in a time of unprecedented crisis. The survival of the most nearly absolute value (human life) is at risk. For so long a time, our nation has nurtured and honored the tradition of the freedom and dignity of the individual, but three ideas are making inroads in the thinking of society in general and the medical profession in particular. First, that what is technically possible is right, second, that man is a biological accident, and third, that what is useful is good and right.

The issue of abortion is obscured by the murky waters of deceptive language: "woman's rights over her own body," "products of conception," "every child is a wanted child," and "blat of tissue."

Let me quote Alexander Solzhenitsyn, who has actively opposed the destruction of human values: "All forms of violence are inextricably bound up with the necessity of deception."

Abortion is not the answer to unplanned pregnancies. We must question why this phenomena is occurring and find programs that enrich us as a people, and never choose those that impoverish, distort or victimize.

FREE TRADE AND YELLOWHEAD

- We've a big energy constituency. This Free Trade Agreement provides us secure markets.
- The Free Trade Agreement opens agricultural markets, especially for beef. It does not affect marketing boards or import controls.
- The Free Trade Agreement creates the prospect of more secondary manufacturing. The US has tariffs on many processed goods. With free trade we can do more processing and manufacturing at home.
- The agreement creates more security for our exports of wood and paper products.
- When there is a dispute, we will now have an impartial, fair and binding dispute settlement tribunal. Our exports will not be hostage to US political pressure.
- Free trade can lead to more domestic and foreign investment in Yellowhead and that means more jobs.
- Free trade means lower prices for many consumer goods.

WHAT THE PEOPLE OF YELLOWHEAD ARE SAYING

I'm 100% - 200% in favor. We export over $200 million a year and must have it to survive!

Esso, gov't produce brochure

Esso Petroleum of Canada in co-operation with Alberta Agriculture has produced a brochure promoting the safe handling of anhydrous ammonia fertilizer.

The brochure called Scratching the Surface on Safety contains a message from Agriculture Minister Peter Elving and several key points on how to handle anhydrous ammonia products and application equipment. The brochure provides facts about anhydrous ammonia, reviews safety procedures in the field, lists action to be taken in the event of an emergency and provides a check list to follow.

There is also a quiz section on the back panel, which is to be returned to local Esso agents.

Barley shortage looming

Charlie Pearson, a market analyst with Alberta Agriculture, says the Canadian barley situation mirrors that of the world coarse grain situation - tighter supplies for the coming year.

The Canadian 1988 barley situation is forecast at 10 million tonnes, down four million tonnes from 1987. Canadian farmers cut back barley acreage this past spring in response to its poorer profitability compared to other crops," he says.

Barley yields this year vary considerably across the Prairies, ranging from extremely poor in the drought areas to well above average in central and northern Alberta.

Alberta farmers are forecast to have harvested 4.7 million acres of barley in 1988, down from 5.6 million acres in 1987. Average Alberta barley yields are forecast to be nearly 55 bushels per acre, a one bushel per acre increase from the previous year.

Family becoming familiar to newspaper readers

By Chris Kreiser

Okay, tell the truth, have you read enough about my family and me yet? All in favor raise your right hand.

Since June of this year we have appeared (for your reading pleasure of course) 12 times (Contrary to popular belief I do not secretly own a portion of the paper, nor do I receive a percentage of sales of The Western Review (That's not a bad idea though). It seems likely wherever we've been, there follows The Western Review van. Could it just simply be good reporter ting?

But alas the cat is out of the bag. Everyone now knows that I am Fred the fish and wildlife officer's wife and my children's names are Rachel and Derek, not Ryan and Rebecca. The kids' names may have been fictitious but their escapades are not. Coffee with Chris really is life in the Kreiser household.

When we first moved to town and I started writing I thought I would protect their identity. Little did I realize the intimacy of a small town.

Within the first month Derek was being called Ryan at school. He wasn't indignant about the leasing he received he was insulted they didn't get his name right (I fear star material).

Rachel was not spared either, she informed me our neighbor insisted on calling her Rebecca. So what was I trying to protect? The fact that my kids are normal, everyday kind of kids, acting like normal, ordinary average kids at?

Councillor Alex Salfi has been extremely busy of late. Besides the everyday rigors of the business world, the Salfis have moved from their home in the southwest corner of town to the MacKenzie area.

New signs, big as life, will help cars and trucks get into the right stalls at Drayton's Pride Car and Truck Wash on 50th Ave.

Bumper sticker of the week "I owe, I owe, so off to work I go."

When the kids asked me almost two years ago why their names weren't spelled right in the paper I had conveniently blamed Frank Ryan, the editor. I explained he must have made a mistake initially and that perhaps we would now have to leave it. I realized my error when I recently asked Rachel how she felt about my columns. I inquired if she found them embarrassing and made it clear that if she did I would stop writing. Without a moment's hesitation she replied, "No it's okay mommy, but please tell that man what my real name is. He's still mixed up."

So, let the record show, they are, and will always be, Derek and Rachel.

Life goes on. No doubt you will be reading about them. Fred and me, in The Western Review in the future. This is home, and it feels good to be part of such a vibrant community.

Please don't answer my in this question. I have visions of having to face sidewalks of people with their right hands raised.

Drayton Sports Centre manager Darren Urkerich says there's a possibility the lights may be changed to eliminate the shadow patches that are so evident.

Staff at the sports centre were sporting matching jackets last week - pretty sharp.

And still at the sports centre, the cement barriers in the parking lot were rearranged prior to the grand opening so the light standards wouldn't be in the middle of the driving lane.

Blair Proctor, band instructor at Frank Maddock high school, was seen on the ice at the sports centre recently. However, he didn't have any skates on. Because he couldn't find any blades, Proctor was content in walking along the boards with one of his daughters.

Ken Hutchinsin was observed hobbling around the sports centre on crutches recently. Seema he has another knee injury.

Soil, water conservation complement wildlife

A consensus was reached by the newly formed Wildlife Ministers' Council of Canada to vigorously pursue coordination of agricultural and wildlife conservation programs in the coming year.

The ministers unanimously recognized the objectives for soil and water conservation programs are complementary with those for wildlife habitat conservation programs.

As Alberta's minister of forestry, lands and wildlife LeRoy Fjordbotten noted, habitat loss is one of the most serious problems facing the maintenance of Canada's valuable wildlife resource. Habitat preservation initiatives are highly effective when they are combined with agricultural policies which favor wildlife and soil conservation.

With soil conservation programs, wildlife habitat is protected from erosion and degradation.

Local input lacking

Drayton Valley area's input into a Battle River Tourism Association tourism project proved to be virtually non-existent," says chamber president Grant Moosour.

The specially funded project raised Team Tourism requirements from communities in the region.

"Unfortunately, there was not a lot of input from this area," said Moosour, who pointed out that a meeting in Breton was not well attended. The Team Tourism marketing plan was unveiled at the association's annual meeting in Camrose Oct. 22. Moosour attended the meeting along with chamber director Neil Hyslop and town councillor Jean Saunders.

Career fair at college

Olds College is holding its first career fair and awareness day on Friday (Nov. 19) to feature career opportunities that exist through agricultural-related training.

The career fair provides the opportunities for people to learn about the skills they gain in one program can be transferred from one job to another.

The career fair and awareness day will run from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the student alumni centre.

Special activities include hourly farm tours, information sessions on the programs and a forum where more than 35 industry representatives will talk about opportunities in their areas.

There is no charge. For more information call Stephen Avery at 556-8236.

of wildlife habitat and agricultural conservation programs is expected to become increasingly more attractive. The North American Waterfowl Management Plan and the National Soil Conservation Plan offer opportunities for meaningful cooperative work.

The ministers agreed to encourage reviews of existing agricultural and land use policies and programs in their own provinces from the perspective of conserving wildlife habitat, soil and water resources.

In addition, the wildlife ministers applauded the cooperation developing between the agricultural and wildlife sectors regarding resources conservation including the pilot projects under way in many provinces.

The council supports the continued coordination of agricultural and wildlife habitat conservation programs, the next opportunity for which will be the Western Provincial Conference in November.

BUILDING A BETTER WORKPLACE FOR ALBERTANS

One of the most important laws which protects employees in provincially regulated industries in the Employment Standards Code is that protects employees by ensuring their pay and entitlements are at least equal to the legal minimums. In today's dynamic work world, it's important for employment standards to keep in step with changing conditions. That's why the minimum standards were changed on November 1, 1988.

- ◆ to enhance existing standards
- ◆ to provide new entitlements
- ◆ to establish new levels of protection for employees.

ALBERTA'S NEW EMPLOYMENT STANDARDS CODE

...staying in touch with today's changing work world.

The new Employment Standards Code means a better workplace for Albertans. Some changes which could affect you include:

Parental Leave: Up paid time away from work up to 18 weeks for a mother up to eight weeks for a male or for an employer adopting a child under three years of age.

Increased Paid Vacation: After five years of employment with the same employer, employees will get three weeks paid vacation. After six years of employment, employees will get four weeks paid vacation.

Greater Flexibility in Hours of Work: Employees and employers can agree that an employee who is paid for time off with regular pay equaling the vacation hours worked. An employee can also compress a four-week scheduling cycle for increased daily hours of work or return for paid rest days.

Rest Periods: Employees working in excess of five consecutive hours now receive a paid or unpaid one-half hour rest period.

Enhanced Employee Protection: New provisions provide added protection for recovering employee earnings in case of insolvency. Another new provision requires employers to give their employees advance notice before their pay or other entitlements are reduced. Employees can also sue for requiring their salary, earnings, or bonus be reinstated or compensated.

Extended Notice of Termination: Depending on the years of service and with certain exceptions, employees whose services are terminated must be given from one to eight weeks' written notice or equivalent pay. Employees are now required to provide up to two weeks' written termination notice to employers.

The Code also has standards for employee wages, hours of work, vacation, general holidays, employment termination and the employer's of adolescents, young persons, farm workers and domestic employees.

For further information on how the new Code may affect you, please call the Employment Standards Branch in your area or call toll free:

Petro Canada holds women's auto clinic

Petro Canada's new car care clinic for women has been extremely successful, according to station manager Brad Janishewski.

"We have more than we can handle for this week and some people have already registered for next week," he said last Wednesday.

Janishewski said women have been so receptive to the free two-day seminar because they've been trusting strangers and they don't want to pay for something that's not necessary.

Janishewski said the course which starts with the basics enables them to determine what's wrong with their cars and if, indeed, certain repairs are necessary.

He spends the first evening going over the brake system, how to fit a tire, how to avoid rust, how to wash a car and a guest speaker explains what to do in an accident and discusses safe driving on winter roads.

"I also answer any questions the women have about their own cars," he said.

The second evening goes more in-depth with videos and information on maintaining a car.

"We really encourage maintenance because a lot of repairs can be avoided. Of course, a vehicle can't last forever but Janishewski goes over the braking system at the clinic.

They'll be able to make a logical decision if something goes wrong," he said.

Janishewski said the local Petro Canada station will offer the free two-day clinic as long as there is interest.

"Some stations get involved with little league, others with this," he said. "Petro Canada is quite community minded."

He said Drayton Valley is one of the few rural communities offering this clinic, mostly because people in smaller towns tend to go to one station for years. But the clinic has become extremely popular in major cities, he said.

Work starts next month

Work is expected to start next month on renovations to the Shangkai Lodge.

Dave Lundberg, a Meridian Foundation board member, says they are just waiting for prices.

Total cost of the project has been estimated at $2.5 million.

According to information released at an August press conference, the new lodge will have 22 units in the current building and another 38 in an addition. All rooms will be fully furnished with private baths.

The fight to get the lodge upgraded has been going on for six years.

The project is expected to take about a year to complete.

Plans for the renovation and addition can be seen at the lodge.

Good records necessity in today's farms

By Bev Brooks

Direct Home Economics
Farming is a much more complex and competitive business than it was 30 years ago when it was easier to keep everything in your head.

As the need for farm information grows, so does the need for paperwork. Faced with this growing need for up-to-date information, now may be a good time to take a long, hard look at the kind of recordkeeping system you have. More isn't always better when it comes to record keeping. New information is organized and how accessible it is, are the most important factors to consider.

So what's the best way to organize bills, receipts, test results, production figures and all the other information you need to keep the farm running smoothly? The answer depends on the nature of the enterprise and the farmer.

Many farmers have developed a sophisticated system, complete with computer while others keep most of what they know in their head and the rest in a shoebox. Either way, it's important you know what your expenses and receipts are. You will be able to keep track of this by developing a recordkeeping system that's practical and works well for you.

Record books should be up- to date

The main purpose of a recordkeeping system is to translate, record, digest, display and produce information. Who needs all this information? First of all, you need information about the efficiency and productivity of your business to make business decisions. Landlords need financial statements to assess a farmer's capacity to repay loans. Accountants need detailed records to prepare income tax returns. Your family needs good records to make personal financial decisions.

It's time to begin thinking about organizing your 1988 information, if you haven't done so already. All income and expenses should be recorded in an orderly and easily understood system.

To discuss up-to-date recordkeeping and accounting systems, give me a call at 542-5368. Or, register for our upcoming farm recordkeeping course. It is being held Nov. 24 and 25 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Provincial Building. The registration fee covers all course materials. Pre-registration is necessary.

Marketing is key to viable agriculture sector

By Shirley Cripps
Drayton Valley MLA

The key to a viable agriculture sector is marketing. The Alberta government is working to develop solid trading relationships on two fronts: North American U.S. and internationally.

The Pacific Rim is developing trade opportunity for Alberta. Next week I am going to China, Japan and Korea on an agricultural mission. I am excited with the prospect of the possible benefits to be reaped by this mission.

Alberta's trade with the People's Republic of China totalled $187 million in 1987. The majority of these exports were wheat and barley. It is important for Alberta to reinforce Canada's position with China to remain a future supplier of these products.

Heilongjiang, Alberta's sister province in China, has initiated a large economic development program for the province. This mission will confirm our interest and intent to support our private sector to develop the province in the area of grassland improvement, beef industry, processed foods, and livestock management. Increased trade with Alberta will be a result of our technical contributions.

Japan represents Alberta's most significant market for Alberta beef. It is anticipated that by the year 2000 Alberta could realistically export over $300 million U.S. to Japan, which would mean a doubling of our present beef exports. To develop this market, all the major packers and other groups will form a team to present a major beef demonstration in Tokyo. My participation in this event will, hopefully, raise the profile of it and demonstrate our commitment to the market.

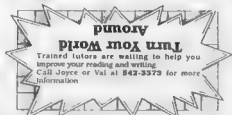

The province of Hokkaido in Japan is also twinned with Alberta and they have expressed interest in Alberta livestock genetics and seed grains and forages. Hokkaido represents an important market for Alberta producers and this mission should help our future market development activities here.

The Brazeau plant started up in July 1985

Workers begin the earthwork for the expansion

Plant superintendent John Wasson.

Construction supervisor Fred Schweitzer, left, and production supervisor Dwayne Zeller check out the progress of the expansion

$55-million sour-gas expansion will be boost to local economy

By Mike Fletcher

It is not all doom and gloom in the oil patch. Petro Canada has recently commenced work at its Brazeau sour-gas plant west of Drayton Valley and plans to both increase output by four hundred per cent and provide a helpful boost to the local economy at the same time.

The expansion, set for completion in December 1989, will quadruple the daily output of liquid sulphur at the plant from 90 tonnes to 360 tonnes. The Energy Resources Conservation Board has also approved a 75 million cubic feet-per-day raw gas capacity. The existing plant is capable of handling only about one-third of that.

The major expansion has been budgeted to cost participating oil companies roughly $55 million and will make the Petro Canada plant one of the largest facilities in the region.

Currently we have three sulphur trucks, but after the expansion we expect to have about a dozen," predicts plant superintendent John Wasson, who was illustrating the magnitude of the upgrading.

Wasson says the expansion project was spurred by recent studies which revealed the Nisku carbonate bank the oil company was drawing its sour gas from was in fact a lot larger than first presumed.

"Originally, the reserves weren't well defined," acknowledges Wasson. "The plant was built to (cope with) the proven reserves at that time." The Brazeau plant first started up in July 1985. The reservoir is estimated to contain about 350 billion cubic feet of raw gas.

Wasson says it's "hard to tell" exactly how much impact the development will have on the area, but he contends there's little doubt the project will provide an economic shot in the arm.

"We currently estimate we spend about $5 million in the local economy, and that should at least double during the time of construction."

Construction supervisor Fred Schweitzer says the general contractor Delta Projects Inc. of Calgary, has strived to draw as much of its labor force as possible from local communities. Currently about 22 per cent of the workers at the site are area people.

"We're trying to get as many local workers as possible," notes Schweitzer, who supervised the building of the original plant. One drawback is that it's a union contract, anyone who wants to work here has to either join a union or get a permit.

He adds that a second obstacle is the lack of available labor in the region, explaining the oil industry is still fairly active and workers are often difficult to obtain.

At its construction peak early next spring, the gas plant expansion should be employing about 250 workers. Currently, there are 51 laborers at the site. Construction began less than three months ago.

Wasson says operational staff will also increase as a result of the expansion, with about another 20 permanent jobs being proposed.

Partly as a result of this, expansion fever has hit Petro Canada's administrative complex. "We've always been short of office space," Wasson points out.

Aside from Petro Canada, Texaco and Amoco are two other major owners of the plant. All owner companies are footing the $55 million bill, although the price tag for each company will depend on how much of a working interest it holds in the plant.

Wrinkle war can't be won

Consumer's Corner

By Samia Valievand

Consumers Association
The arrival of facial wrinkles evokes different responses in different people: some ignore them, others consider them a badge of honor and a great many wish they weren't there.

Unhappy at the prospect of growing older and less attractive, they declare war on their wrinkles and deploy a battalion of expensive lotions, creams and snake oils. And what a battalion there is.

The cosmetic industry is responding to an increasingly older population with a renewed emphasis on products that promise to reverse the effects of aging. But can any cosmetic preparation win the war against wrinkles permanently? The answer is simply no.

The cosmetic jar does not hold a cure. What it will hold in most cases will be moisturizers for dry skin. Dry skin does not cause wrinkles. But moist, soft skin even if wrinkled looks better than rough dry skin. This effect can come with equal success from a $100 jar of cream with an exotic name or from a plain old jar of petroleum jelly.

If this is the case, why would anyone pay these exorbitant prices?

One reason is that consumers tend to associate a higher price with better quality and value. As well, they are buying hopes and dreams. It is very easy to get carried away in the marketplace. The bottom line is, there just aren't any miracles out there for our wrinkles.

New chairman won't make changes

By Christine Sanzella

Story Plan Reporter

County of Parkland schools will survive despite recent government cuts in funding says new chairman Ken Fuhr.

Fuhr was voted chairman at the boards organizational meeting of Oct. 25 Margaret McNary is the new vice chairman.

I think we can still make it," says Fuhr admitting the cuts were a real concern to this board. Many programs were streamlined after the cuts says Fuhr adding it was good to go back and review what the programs were doing.

The new Twin Rivers school division and the new School Act are more issues for the board to work on, says Fuhr.

Fuhr says the board will continue to provide for Drayton Valley schools until the end of the year, and then he says a fair split of assets will occur after Dec. 31.

The new School Act brings some changes the board will have to deal with, policies to change says Fuhr. He did not say what policies would be affected.

Fuhr says the Labor Act is another issue the board will deal with.

There's still some concerns with the Labor Act if it applies to the teaching profession," says the chairman.

The board won't change the way it conducts its business now that he's chairman, Fuhr says. I suppose there's a tendency for a new person to change things, but I don't see any drastic changes," he says.

Residents upset over recent Wheat Pool elevator closure

By Shell Carson
 Breton residents once again have bus service to Edmonton.
 Morrie Cores of Rimby, will operate a 36-passenger bus every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. The bus will leave from Quality Auto at 8:30 a.m. and arrive at the downtown Edmonton bus depot at 10:45 a.m. Departure will leave from the depot at 6 p.m. for the return trip.
 The bus will also carry freight and will have scheduled stops at Headley, Winfield, Breton, Alsike corner, Warburg, Thorby, Calmar and Devon. Flag stops are at Bluffton corner and Sunnybrook.

 The Alberta Wheat Pool has set in motion a plan to turn the Breton elevator into a satellite station for Thorby. This means Breton's elevator will only be open for grain if the Thorby elevator is full.
 Alberta Wheat Pool states the Breton elevator is losing money. Are these losses "true losses"? Why does the grain stay so long in the elevator waiting for grain cars to arrive? Who controls the ordering of grain cars? There are many unanswered questions.

 The Breton and District Chamber of Commerce and the village council invite area residents to become involved. A petition is available in Breton stores and the village office. Residents are also urged to present briefs or letters supporting the full-time operation of the elevator.

The Breton Order of the Royal Purple held their regular meeting with 11 members present. Visiting the meeting were District Deputy Joyce Kreiger and Liz Chalky.
 The OORP will hold a luncheon and bake sale Dec 2.
 The highlight of the meeting was the presentation of a 35-year service pin to Katie Eluk.
 The Breton Historical Museum Society will be concentrating on the permanent collection for the next two or three months. They would like donations to the settler's cabin (inside and out) and logging artifacts. Photographs are also needed. Other artifacts such as early handicrafts, items from business in town, etc. would be appreciated.

 The society needs your ideas as well as donations of articles.
 Welcome to the community to Floyd and Linda Steeves and family who have recently moved here from Altam, Alberta. Floyd is the new Breton village foreman.

Reserves open to hunters

The Public Lands Division and the Alberta Fish and Wildlife Division would like to inform hunters the following provincial grazing reserves in the northeast area of the province are available for public access during the deer hunting season.

Gates will be left unlocked except for holding fields for pasture supervisor's herds. Some gates may be closed due to stray cattle yet to be removed and hunters are required to close these gates after entry. Please advise the reserve headquarters if stray cattle are seen.

Some of the following grazing reserves are included in a public access routing program: Rannach Grazing Reserve, Blackbear, Connor Creek, Jackpine, Minburn, St. Paul, Smoky Lake, Thorild and Wolf Lake.

Hunters using these reserves are requested to respect this program, keep areas clean, and prevent damage to fences and gates. You may encounter someone who asks questions about the vehicle access routing program and your cooperation would be appreciated.

Hunters are also urged to check their hunting regulations and respect the rights and safety of others.

Any questions in this regard can be directed to the local fish and wildlife office or the Public Lands Division offices in St. Paul and Sherwood Park.

Parkland trustees vote in wage increase

By Christine Lanzetta
Staff Writer

For the first time in eight years, County of Parkland school trustees have given themselves a raise.

Trustees who attend two meetings per month will receive a basic annual honorarium and allowance of $4,038 up from $3,672 in previous years.

The board chairman will receive a basic annual honorarium and allowance of $6,037. The chairman previously received $5,508. The board's salary and allowance for extra meetings was increased by $12 to $130 per meeting.

Although the recommendation to increase trustee remuneration was not passed unanimously, most members were in favor of the proposal.

Trustee Hanne Kulak said the increase was "not nearly enough for the work the members put in, and added a raise was necessary to keep up with inflation and other boards.

Vice chairman Margaret McNary said a raise was necessary because low wages would stop people from running for the board at election time.

Trustee Don Brandenburg voted against the motion. "I really don't think we merit it," he stated.

Did you know?

In the event of a major disaster, the RCMP will cordon off the hospital area and not allow anyone to get in. Disaster Services will immediately set up a relative centre at the H.W. Pickup school.

All relatives will go to this relative centre to receive information on those involved in the disaster, to get emotional and spiritual comfort and to be transported to the hospital by relative centre staff upon hospital approval.

For further information, contact the Disaster Services coordinator, Dave Turner at 512-5327.

Freedom has always been costly

We have just experienced another Remembrance Day. Once again we have been challenged to reflect upon our past. We remember the freedom we enjoy today came to us at great cost. Many Canadians died so that we could live in a nation where justice is prized and a respect for life is promoted.

Freedom has always been costly. Each generation must either claim and defend that legacy or lose it.

I am concerned this generation of Canadians may be in danger of losing its freedom. We have listened to the popular voices which define freedom as the ability to do whatever brings personal pleasure. Acquire and use your material wealth without concern for others. Express your sexuality however your please. Respect life only if it has value in our estimation."

Unfortunately this brand of freedom leads to tyranny. It is like the freedom of a train that has left the tracks. The ride may be thrilling but the end result is disaster.

True freedom is the ability to do what is right. That is, choosing to live in accord with the design of the universe.

How can we know that design? By knowing and obeying the Designer Jesus said that only in knowing Him could we experience genuine freedom (John 8:32, 14:6).

If we choose to forget freedom brings responsibility we may not be long in learning by experience the words of William Penn: "If we are not willing to be governed by God, we shall be ruled by tyrants."

Constitution helps club run smooth

By Janet Carlyon
Regional 4-H Specialist
Rules keep everyone on the same track. Just as it is difficult, if not impossible, to play a game without rules, it is difficult to operate your 4-H club without rules.

The solution? - a 4-H club constitution.

At the beginning of your 4-H club year, members, parents and leaders should review their club constitution together and make any necessary amendments. Each 4-H family should then be sent a copy and keep it handy for reference. By knowing exactly what the guidelines are, everyone is clear on the expectations of themselves and other members and leaders in the club.

The same kinds of feelings can occur in your club as they do in the middle of a game when someone slaps down a new rule. Being aware of all the club's rules right from the start can provide a big savings on disappointments and conflict throughout the year.

Your constitution should include the name of your organization, its purpose, member guidelines and expectations, officers, election procedures and any other regulations which your club feels necessary for a smooth operation. Each club has different needs, the items you want to include in your constitution will depend on those needs.

Everyone involved in your club should accept and abide by the constitution once it has been passed. Your club can establish a special committee of a few members, leaders and parents to draft the constitution. The club must then agree on the constitution and be accepted by everyone concerned. A few changes may be necessary at the time it is presented to the club for approval.

A sample constitution can be obtained from the regional 4-H office, and can also be found in the latest edition of the leaders' information manual.

No one deserves to be beaten

Myth Women "ask for it." They drive men to violence.
Reality Stress and conflict are part of any relationship. Violence is never an appropriate way to solve a problem. No one deserves to be beaten.

In the early stages of a violent relationship, abused women try hard to be and do whatever their husbands want of them, partly in hopes of avoiding the violence. In later stages, a survival technique, some women may provoke fights, to get the violence over with and reduce tension.

Myth Drinking causes abusive behavior.

Reality Though drinking and battering are often associated, one does not cause the other. The batterer has qualities too self-extreme, poor impulse control, which are contributing factors to both drinking and violence.

Interagency presents...

Myth There is no point in helping battered women. They'll just go back.

Reality During this stage, battered women are trying to decide whether to go or stay. Forces pulling them away are as strong as forces pulling them toward the relationship. They go to test if they can survive outside the relationship and return to test if the relationship can change.

While frustrating to outsiders, this stage enables women to finally resolve their situation.

Myth Nobody can help people in a violent relationship.

Reality Across Alberta, people have broken the cycle of violence in their lives. Most had help from others. Helping those in violent relationships is not easy, but it is possible.

Next week an introduction to drug awareness.

Glenn Anderson on Free Trade

Glenn Anderson, both a pilot and member of the future of young Canadians shows his views on what free trade will mean to our youth.

Q: What impact do you think free trade will have on young Canadians?

A: A very positive impact because free trade will create new opportunities for today's youth.

Q: In what way?

A: Canada's future rests with our young people. Free trade will provide the thinking to enter the global community. It will offer them more challenges and offer more opportunities of an international nature.

Q: So you're confident we can compete?

A: Absolutely. I work with young people and I know of their dreams and ambitions. The country they have the drive to carry us into the next century and beyond. They're up to the challenge and then some.

Canada-wide search for escapees

Shortly after 4:30 p.m. on June 13, two Collins Bay, Ont. prisoners escaped in a van leaving the prison. They then stole a truck, in the car lot across from the prison which was later abandoned in Kingston.

One of the prisoners, John Leslie Chalf, a farmer undertaker by profession, was sentenced for the murder of his wife in Cochrane Ont. in 1983. He was to serve a life sentence.

The other escapee, Bruce James Melhuish joined Chalf in Collins Bay penitentiary in 1984 to begin a 14 year stretch for robbery and use of firearms during commission of an offence.

Although neither have been recaptured, both are believed to be living off recently committed crimes. Both are considered desperate and dangerous.

Description
Melhuish is a Caucasian male of medium build with a fair complexion and a lumpy face. He is 178 cms (5 ft. 10 in.) tall, 58 kgs (125 lbs.) with dark brown hair and blue eyes. He has numerous tattoos described as a woman's breast and sword on his left arm and two sharks and a diver on his right arm. He may now be disguised.

Chalf is also Caucasian, bearded (which now may be removed) and 173 cms (5 ft. 8 in.) tall, 63 kg (140 lbs.) with brown hair, blue eyes and may be wearing glasses. Well spoken, he considers himself an intellectual and frequents race tracks (thorses). He has scars on his lower right leg and abdomen (appendix scar). Both men like camping and have some scuba diving experience.

John Chalf - sentenced for murder

Bruce Melhuish - armed robbery

Should you have any information on either subject please contact your local police.

I've left a lot of marks, lot of stains'

By Belinda Atherton

With the skill of a seasoned welder a local senior once built an 18-foot automobile out of two.

But a little 'vener' suitcase caught his eye and he couldn't resist a trade.

I still have that suitcase laughs Gordon McEabern. But my boys got ashamed of me using it.

A friend once informed McEabern she'd found a dog tag dating back to 1937. It was, in fact, the first dog tag ever issued in Saskatchewan.

She offered to give the trinket away but he insisted she accept a horse in trade.

I hated that horse. It was just a stupid pony," he said.

McEabern's 79 years have been filled with odd inventions and peculiar trades. One might say he suffers from underdeveloped bargaining skills and an overactive imagination.

Among McEabern's more prized inventions is a gift he made for his crippled grand son.

McEabern invented a bicycle that could be steered with one wheel and propelled forward with another. "My grandson" used an electric wheelchair for a while but he went back to using mine.

Senior of the Week

McEabern would be a rich man today if he had patented the design but he wasn't quick enough.

A man came up from the States and copied it," he said. Now they're all over China and the United States.

McEabern may not be known as an inventor but he has his own claim to fame. "I'd like to think I've left a lot of part of myself everywhere I've been," he says. "Yep, I've left a lot of marks and a lot of stains."

McEabern doesn't like to talk about the stains but he says the marks have added up to a lot of iron work over the years.

I made a Catholic marker just outside a community cemetery," he said. "That's real nice. It's a piece of art."

McEabern's intricate welding adorns a number of churches and cemeteries but he holds a particular bond to one piece of work that few people will ever see.

placed 500 feet up a mountain overlooking three towns.

I did some iron work around my wife's grave. I engraved Charlotte's name and some other designs in the railing," he said.

Charlotte's been gone for 13 years now but he's far from alone.

In what should be considered the most well-to-do family ever born in Alberta, McEabern boasts nine living brothers and sisters from a family of 13, six children, 10 grandchildren and seven great grandchildren.

I contacted the Guinness Book of World Records to issue a challenge," said daughter Fay, who teased McEabern to live with her for the winter.

She wanted to know if any Alberta born family has lived as long as hers but the editor said she wasn't interested.

"I think it's a legitimate record," she says.

But lack of recognition seems quite in keeping with McEabern's life. Record books, ratings, statues and strange inventions may not bear the man's name but at least he knows he's made a mark.

Gordon McEabern's imagination could have made him

"We don't care how well you've served your party, we don't care how high your profile is, we don't even care that you're a former prime minister - if you won't represent our views in the House of Commons, you will be replaced by someone who will!"

— Preston Manning on Joe Clark

Elect PRESTON MANNING for YELLOWHEAD

Only Preston Manning can offer the voters of Yellowhead the opportunity for TRUE representation in the House of Commons.

Whereas Joe Clark continues to alienate Western Canadians with his support of enforced bilingualism and economic favoritism towards Ontario and Quebec, Preston Manning makes representing YOU his number one priority.

This election, vote for effective change. Change that ensures Western Canadian viewpoints on such important issues as Free Trade, Meech Lake, official languages, Triple-E Senate government spending and regional fairness tests will no longer be misrepresented.

Vote Reform. Vote for Preston Manning on November 21st.

Dr. William McDonald on Free Trade:

Dr. McDonald is a member of the Senate of the House of Commons and former Minister of Health in the Liberal Party of Canada.

Q: Do you feel free trade will jeopardize our nation's health and social programs?

A: No, I don't see our programs being hurt at all. They're funded and I'm confident our government will not allow them to be tampered with. And my understanding is that no Canadian or Alberta health or social programs will be affected by the agreement.

Q: So, what impact will free programs?

A: I anticipate that the support means to our citizens as a result of the health care system and that the health care programs we run will be better.

Q: Anything more you'd like to add?

A: I'm a strong supporter of Canada and proud to be a Canadian. I think Canadians are quite capable of adapting to change, especially when that change will be beneficial.

He is one of the speakers at the "Talk in Free Trade" which will start at 7:30 p.m. on Nov. 15 at the Caesar's Inn.

Fire burning permit season extended

The Alberta Forest Service in cooperation with the Department of Transportation and Utilities, advise that a combination of residual smoke from burning and weather factors could create dangerous driving conditions along certain highways this fall.

Due to these conditions, the fire burning permit season in forest control zones 7, 13 and 14 has been extended from Oct. 31 to Nov. 30. These zones include the Drayton Valley, Hinton, Edson, Whitecourt, Fox Creek, Fort Assiniboine, Swan Hills, Flatbush and Smith areas.

Provincial roads in these areas include Highway 16 and parts of Highway 40 between Rob and Brzeau River, highways 32, 33, 43, 14, 620, 621, 65A, 661, 749, 751, 753 and 763.

Proper fitting shoes can relieve sore feet

By Dr. Bob Young

Metatarsalgia has a nice ring to it. It certainly sounds more impressive than plain old sore feet, but that is what it means.

To be precise, the term refers to the forefoot. The metatarsal bones form the small ankle bones (tarsals) to the toes, and alga means pain. There are a number of causes for pain in this part of the foot, and the problems keep both doctors and podiatrists busy.

Sometimes the pain is due to pinching or irritation of the nerves going to the toes. These nerves may run under the ball of the foot and become tangled in scar or arthritic forms. Occasionally a neuroma or nerve tumor (not cancer) forms. When this growth is squeezed, often just by normal walking, severe pain results.

Acquired deformities of the forefoot are the commonest cause of metatarsalgia. These result from wear and tear, degenerative arthritis, and, many feel, poor footwear. Women's shoes are often blamed, and metatarsalgia is certainly more common in women.

The deformities include such things as highly arched feet, claw and hammer toes, bunions, and the secondary problems of corns and calluses.

Metatarsalgia causes grief out of proportion to the area involved. Even if the patient is not limping and hobbling around, pain is a problem, interfering with work and recreational activity.

Treatment varies. Both neuromas and arthritis may respond to injections of local anesthetics and cortisone, and arthritis may improve using aspirin and other drugs, but usually doesn't.

Orthotics, or special shoe inserts, often help and are favored by sport medicine specialists and podiatrists. They seem to me to be over-priced in many cases.

I have been warmly thanked by many patients, usually older women, after I have referred them to a skilled fitter of what are loosely called running shoes. Fashion is replaced by comfort when modern, highly researched footwear is accepted.

Often enough relatively minor surgical procedures are required to correct the mechanical deformities causing metatarsalgia.

Fire escape routes can save lives

If your house is on fire, it's probably too late for you to figure out how you're going to get out alive.

To survive a fire, you and the people you live with should know instinctively what to do when the alarm goes. You won't have those precious extra minutes to get yourself organized.

Plan your fire escape together. Draw up a floor plan of your house. Be aware of at least two exits from each room. One will be your main route; the other will be the alternate, in case the first one is blocked by fire or thick smoke.

Be aware of the limitations of small children and disabled people. Your fire escape plan should give priority to them. Teach small children not to hide under the bed, or in closets during a fire.

Escape routes such as windows, stairways and hallways must be kept clear and windows should open easily. Teach children that it's all right to break a window during an emergency. A blanket placed over the sill may prevent cuts from broken glass. Rope or chain ladders for upstairs windows could save a life if an exit is blocked.

Decide on a place outside for everyone to meet. The spot should be far enough away from the house to be safe from the fire. Share your escape plan with overnight visitors and babysitters.

How do I practice my fire escape plan? Hold fire drills regularly, at least once a year, with the entire household.

To start the drill, have everyone in their bedrooms.

Keep doors closed or open, whichever you normally do at night. Sound the alarm by having one person shout or push the test button on the smoke alarm.

Roll out of bed and crawl to the door (in a smoke-filled room, air near the floor is fresher). Feel the door knob. If it's too hot to handle, try the alternate exit. Meet outside at your pre-arranged spot. Never stop to retrieve valuables or re-enter a burning building.

Review the procedure for calling the fire department. One person should be designated to make the call from a neighbor's house. Children should memorize their address and practice giving it over the telephone.

A little time spent on home fire drills may save lives if fire ever strikes your home.

Why wait for winter to seal air leaks

As winter approaches you'll hear a great deal about the importance of weather stripping and caulking to keep heat inside your house.

That's the time when most home owners attack the problems of heat loss. But why wait? If you do the job now you'll be ready to save on heating costs when winter arrives, and you'll also save on the costs of running your air conditioner through the hot months. The same leaks that let heat escape during the winter let heat in during the summer. This increases your air conditioner's workload as well as your electricity bill.

A thorough job of weather stripping and caulking can reduce your fuel bill in winter by 10 to 15 percent, and will also cut costs of running your air conditioner in summer.

Doors and windows are prime candidates for attention. Use weather stripping between doors and frames and between windows and frames. In old houses leaks often develop where the frame is set into the wall. These leaks should be sealed with caulking.

To help locate leaks you might want to use the candle test. Pass a lighted candle slowly past window frames and door frames. When the candle flutters you've detected a leak that needs sealing.
